Originally, 149 units were built in 1973 using HUD project-based Section 8 subsidies. In 1998, MidPen purchased and renovated the property to prevent its conversion to market-rate housing. Seeing an opportunity to provide even more housing on the 8-acre site, in 2008 MidPen completed 104 high-quality new units on parking lots and other underutilized space. The sensitive design ensured that the spacious feel of the property was preserved, and green building measures including solar panels were employed. At the same time, MidPen implemented a major energy-saving rehab of the older units, installing insulation, new siding, and high-performance windows, and adding unit patios for the enjoyment of residents.

A major renovation of the extensive grounds was one of the first to follow Bay-Friendly guidelines in Santa Clara County, and included drought-tolerant plants and high-efficiency irrigation systems.
